Chamber Honors Former CCC&TI President

A former Caldwell Community College and Technical Institute President was honored with the Caldwell Chamber of Commerce’s LA Dysart Man of the Year Award at the organization’s annual dinner on Feb. 7.

In 2016, Dr. Kenneth Boham capped a nearly 40-year career in higher education – a majority of which was spent as a leader and innovator in Caldwell and Watauga counties. He made his retirement official in June after more than 21 years as President of CCC&TI, leaving a legacy that included un-precedented enrollment, facility expansion and successful partnerships.

“He unified the community,” according to one community member who nominated him. “He would get the job done without taking credit and always did what was best for students.”

Under Boham’s leadership, CCC&TI served as a state model in the development of “seam- less education” through the Career Center Middle College, the Appalachian State Uni- versity Center and the Caldwell Early Col- lege High School. During his tenure, CCC&TI established a permanent campus in Boone, retrained thousands of displaced workers during the Great Recession and experienced the greatest growth in the institution’s 50-year history.

His volunteer service includes: the NC Com- mission on Workforce Development, NC As- sociation of Community College Presidents, Caldwell Chamber of Commerce, Caldwell County Smart Start, the Foundation of CCC&TI and Caldwell 20/20. Recognition for his decades of work in education includes: the Order of the Long Leaf Pine, NC Communi- ty College System President of the Year, I.E. Ready Distinguished Graduate Award from NC State, CCB’s Golden Apple Award, the Caldwell Economic Development Commis- sion Herman Anderson Award and the Caldwell Chamber Visionary Award.

Former Department Chair Receives Award

Former Corporate and Continuing Education Department Chair Donna Bean was recently honored for her workforce development efforts while at CCC&TI. During the Caldwell Economic Development Commis- sion’s annual celebration, Bean was presented with this year’s Herman Anderson Award, given annually for economic development achievement. Bean, who was part of the EDC’s industrial recruitment team through her role at CCC&TI, is now Finance Director for the City of Lenoir.

The Foundation of CCC&TI Launches Faculty/Staff Campaign

The Foundation of Caldwell Community College and Technical Institute launched the faculty/staff phase of its Annual Fund Campaign on Feb. 1 with a luncheon in the Forlines Board Room on the Caldwell Campus. The luncheon featured comments from Peg Broyhill, chair of the Foundation Board, Deborah Murray, Vice-Chair of the Foundation Board, CCC&TI President Dr. Mark Poarch, Vice Presidents Dena Holman and Margaret Hampson and Foundation Executive Director Marla Christie.

Broyhill announced that the Foundation Board has set a goal of $365,000 for this year's effort. Priorities for the fund include scholarships, student aid, the Dream program, academic support and endowment support. "The faculty/staff campaign sets the pace each year for our community campaign," said Broyhill. "Thank you. Your support of the Annual Fund helps us move mountains and meet challenges to create a path to success for more students."

Foundation Board Vice-Chair Deborah Murray talked with those in attendance about how far our community has come over the last several years and how the college has played a vital role in that growth. "CCC&TI offers some of the best training in the state. There is no more noble thing than growing the economic future for everyone who lives in this community and that's what you all are doing," said Murray. "Don't take that for granted. Tell your story and we will reach our goal."

In his remarks, Dr. Mark Poarch stressed the importance of CCC&TI's internal campaign and expressed his gratitude for the faculty and staff's past contributions. "Your investment in and support of the Foundation helps us break down barriers and provide a quality education to our students," said Poarch. "The Foundation is what sets us apart and makes us different. It's what makes us the best. Thank you for all you've done and what you'll do this year for our students."

Each faculty and staff member is encouraged to give to this year's Annual Fund Campaign. Pledge cards are available in the Foundation office located in Beam Hall (Caldwell Campus A Building) and can also be obtained from faculty and staff team captains who are working to contact each employee individually.

For more information on the Foundation's 2016 Annual Fund Campaign, contact Foundation Executive Director Marla Christie at 726-2203.

CCC&TI Radiography Program Receives Highest Accreditation Rating from National Accrediting Agency

Caldwell Community College and Technical Institute's Radiography Program has been awarded an eight-year accreditation rating from the Joint Review Committee on Education in Radiologic Technology (JRCERT), the highest award given by the agency.

Seeking national accreditation is a voluntary process that administrators at CCC&TI have chosen to complete in order to enhance quality and safety of the program and promote excellence in patient care among graduates. Over the course of a three year process, JRCERT requires that programs meet nine standards and 66 objectives ranging from student outcomes, faculty qualifications, resources and services to students, to radiation safety and fiscal responsibility of the program.

"CCC&TI is fully committed to both institutional and programmatic accreditation. Accreditation promotes excellence in education by providing guidelines to assure that programs maintain high standards and by monitoring program performance measures such as retention, exam pass rates and employment rates," said Barbara Harris, Health Sciences Department Chair at CCC&TI. "Graduates of accredited programs can be assured that they will be provided with the knowledge, skills and professional values required for success in their chosen field. The Radiography program at CCC&TI has a long history of providing a quality educational experience for its students. We have been able to upgrade the equipment for our imaging programs in the past few years, including providing two fully energized x-ray labs for instruction."

Radiography Program Director Amber Edwards agrees with Harris and says that the program and its graduates have a bright future ahead. "This accreditation award is a great benefit to our students as it guarantees that graduates will be eligible for licensure and employment as radiographers in all 50 states," said Edwards. "And as for the program, I could not be happier. The 8-year accreditation is the maximum award that any program can earn. It really is the highest standard that all radiography programs strive for and is proof of all of the hard work that has been taking place here. The future of CCC&TI's Radiography program is incredibly bright and exciting!"

In addition to the benefits of training through an accredited program, CCC&TI radiography students are also getting the benefits of a newly acquired "lab partner" in the form of an imaging phantom. An imaging phantom is specially designed for use in the medical imaging field to help train technologists or to evaluate, analyze and adjust the performance of imaging equipment. For CCC&TI students, it means that they can get experience in imaging and positioning a life-sized replica of the human skeletal system without exposing actual humans to the radiation associated with x-ray images. "The phantom is a great tool for us to have in our labs," said Edwards. "Obviously, students can't practice on each other, but they can use the phantom to mimic the positioning of a real patient and then actually image it as well. It has a full skeleton inside of it."

The Radiography program acquired the new phantom in January 2017. While students are getting acquainted with their new "lab partner" Edwards says they've not landed on a name for it yet. "A few names have been tossed around but none have stuck yet," she said. "He really needs a name, though." Stay tuned to CCC&TI's Facebook page for new developments on a moniker for the phantom.

Love is in the Air!

Caldwell Community College and Technical Institute's Watauga Campus had a Valentine's Day drawing display in the lobby of the main building for half the month of February. The table was decorated in pink and red and displayed an array of charming and enticing Valentine's Day prizes. Students were asked to make a donation to the Relay for Life and in return, were entered into a drawing for various prizes.

The winning tickets were pulled on Feb. 14. We had several winners who received prizes ranging from chocolates, stuffed animals, gift bags with Avon bath soaps and perfumes to jewelry hand crafted by one of CCC&TI's very own students. "We raised $190.68, and all donations go to the American Cancer Society. We have so many generous and considerate students, teachers, faculty, and staff who selflessly donated to those in need," said SGA Officer Krystal Cranston. "We'd like to give a big congratulations to those who won a gift for themselves or a loved one and an even bigger thank you to everybody who participated in contributing to such a phenomenal cause!"
